Speaker

Ben is a former international athlete, competing in several World Championship events with the Great Britain rowing team, whilst completing his degree in Leadership and Sports Psychology at Reading University. The combination of these experiences laid the foundation for his interest in optimising individual, team and organisational performance.

After several years of working with corporate and individual clients, Ben became drawn to working with teams in healthcare. He has been developing and delivering training and support in Human Factors and Performance Improvement to healthcare organisations since 2013.

Ben founded MedLed in 2017 with the desire to broaden the scope of practice and bring together a diverse team with complementary skills. He still actively delivers training, support and coaching as well as growing and developing the MedLed team.
